Japanese Houses.

The houses of a thriving Japanese Col-ony at Gold Hill, California, are amusing to the natives. They are uniformly 36 ft long by 30 wide, each containing fou rooms. The roof is low and steep, and runs out like an awning around the house. The inside partitions are of paper, and in summer can be readily folded into compact undles at the corners of the buildings, thus leaving nothing but the roof and sup ports. No matter how complicated the structure may be, not a single nail or spike is anywhere used, the parts are all dove-tailed together, and fitted so nicely as to leave scarcely a trace of the seam No paint, varnish, filagree work or other ornamentation is telerated, and every stick in the building, even to the rafters, is plain and smooth as though polished with and paper. It is kept, in all its depart ments perfectly clean, each nook and cor-ner being daily accured with a wet cloth. The latter would be rather an unpleasant requisite, but in other respects, this would be by no means a bad sort of demicile Serving as a house in winter, it could be transformed into a pavillion in summer, and, on the approach of a hurricance or tax-collector, at any time, the proprietor could unjoint his residence, load it up on a cart, and silently steal away. It is now over forty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sourceign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all ower the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the procession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success.
